Please be as precise as possible.	I don't understand enough about current legislation concerning permitted developments of Greenbelt Land to say why it may be considered legally unsound. It may in fact be technically "legally sound" because legislation has been "tweaked" by those parties interested in getting the plans through? In other words - they've moved the goalposts to suit themselves. This does not necessarily mean that the plans for development will bring any improvements to the quality of life currently enjoyed by the inhabitants of this area. If we are simply cramming more human-kind into an evermore densely-populated area and we continue to follow this strategy; where will it lead us to ultimately? A) an Education infrastructure that cannot cope with the influx of new residents and the demands made upon it. B) a Healthcare system which will become similarly stretched beyond efficient operations. C) Congestion on the local roads which will lead to increased commuting time, loss of productivity, and poor air quality. D) Increased demands on already-stretched services such as refuse collection, domestic water supplies and electricity supply. E) Detrimental effect on the wildlife currently using this area as their home. We ignore bio-diversity at our peril. Life on Earth is dependent on a fragile balance of the species that inhabit it.
